Qualification Overview

This qualification allows learners who are training to be part of the uniformed services the opportunity to develop and practise skills required to operate within their role and to gain the required underpinning knowledge. Learners will, through practical demonstration and assessment, develop and use individual responsibility and autonomy. This will be accomplished in a range of work activities and contexts, both individually and as part of a team.

Aims

Learners will cover a range of core skills required in the uniformed services, including ceremonial duties, team work and physical fitness. Optional units cover skills for the specific branches of the services such as Combat Operations and Seamanship. Learners will then progress onto more specialist training in their chosen field of study.
